Teaching Experience

Hi, I'm a recently graduated Sociology student having just achieved a First from Lancaster Uni. I haven't a huge level of teaching experience, I've looked after disabled children before which I hope proves I'm a responsible individual, but teaching young adults is something new to me. What I do have is a strong academic record (especially for Sociology), passion and commitment to helping others.

At A Level I found Sociology to be mind opening. We go through the education system for 16 years without ever having a lesson that asks, "wait on a sec ... why are we learning this, in whose purpose does it serve, is the education I'm getting worthwhile?" As you know Sociology does this and more. It studies power, conflict, relationships and the quest for a better future. There is no other subject as valuable in today's age. Being fresh out of University we can work together to achieve your desired grade.

Testimonials

On request I can get testimonials from University Professors which testify to my strong academic ability but also my relaxed and friendly character.

Sociology Tuition Approach

I assure you my lessons will be planned to a high standard, whilst hopefully still being fun and engaging. We will go through the A-Level/GCSE textbook in detail, making sure the syllabus content has been covered and all confusion cleared. Knowing the core theory we will plan out practice essays, looking at how you can construct effective debates between the Sociology you know. After this hard work I think it's important to have a more informal talk about the topic of study, including the use of general articles, films and videos. Though this isn't essential for the exam it may help you remember the lesson more.
